The report shows that the economy has grown by 1.2% in 2019, which is a significant improvement over the 0.1% growth in 2018.

The report also highlights the government's efforts to improve the business environment and attract foreign investment, which has led to a 33.3% increase in FDI inflows in 2019.

However, the report notes that the government still faces challenges in the areas of infrastructure development and job creation, which are key priorities for the country's economic growth.

The report also mentions that the government has implemented several measures to support the private sector, including reducing the number of business registration steps and improving the efficiency of the judicial system.

In addition, the report states that the government has successfully reduced the inflation rate to 6.9% in 2019, down from 9.2% in 2018. This is a significant achievement, especially given the global economic uncertainty.

The report also notes that the government has increased its spending on infrastructure development, which is expected to create jobs and stimulate economic growth in the long run.

Overall, the report provides a comprehensive overview of the country's economic performance in 2019, highlighting the government's achievements and the challenges it still faces. It also offers several recommendations for the government to further improve the economy and attract investment.

The report also mentions that the government has successfully reduced the inflation rate to 6.9% in 2019, down from 9.2% in 2018. This is a significant achievement, especially given the global economic uncertainty.
